PREFACE.

ON the 18th of February, 1878, a call for a conference of citizens, to be held in the Board of Trade Rooms, on the 1st of March, was signed by prominent gentlemen of Philadelphia. The purposes of the conference were to consider economy in the administration of charity, to restrain pauperism and beggary, and to discover and relieve worthy and self-respecting poverty.

When this conference was held, a committee of twenty-five, with power to add to their number, was appointed to digest and present a report to a future public meeting of citizens. This committee, which eventually grew to thirty-six, after many protracted and frequent sessions, agreed upon the "Proposed Plan of Organization," herewith printed, and ordered its presentation to the citizens of Philadelphia, at St. George's Hall, on the 13th of June, 1878, with the recommendation "That a Commission of thirty-six persons, representatives of the benevolent interests of this city, be appointed to establish the 'Society for Organizing Charitable Relief and Repressing Mendicancy in Philadelphia.'" The title of this Society was changed simply by transferring the word Philadelphia to an adjective position at the beginning of the title, otherwise the "Plan" remains unchanged to the present time.

The Commission met on the 24th of June, and at once ordered the formation of an Executive Committee of nine, including the treasurer and organizing secretary, to execute the trust imposed upon the Commission in the intervals between its sessions. The summer was passed in various negotiations and consultations, and in the preparation of plans of procedure to be set on foot in the fall, when the city should receive again its summer absentees, and when the members of charitable boards of the churches and the private philanthropists of Philadelphia should be again in their accustomed places.

Early in the autumn measures were taken to establish Ward Associations under "The Proposed Plan," and the project was received in every quarter of the city where it could be presented with resolute hope and intelligent interest. The evils of indiscriminate alms-giving, and the high duty of society to make the path of the lowly to thrift and honor accessible to the depressed, seemed wholly captivating to the thoughtful and experienced people of Philadelphia. Almost at once the demand arose for some explicit directions as to the methods by which humane persons could help the poor with their sympathy, and by which the various charitable institutions of this municipality could be made most economically and judiciously effective. The desire to direct all this eager, earnest inquiry into useful paths has resulted in the production of this little manual. It is a tentative work, put forth for immediate use, but susceptible of such improvement as experience may prescribe. At the same time, no effort has been spared, either by the contributors to its pages, or by the Commission, to give the best results attainable with their opportunities.

Not a paper nor a table here appears which has not been submitted to persons especially proficient in the matter treated, and which has not been revised by thoughtful committees. The aim of this manual has not been to be original, but to be serviceable, and none will be more ready to acknowledge their obligations to forerunners in their especial fields than the editors of the following papers and tables. The Commission have thought it wise not to publish the Manual as the concurrent judgment of this society, but as a series of contributions and compilations for which the authors stand responsible, but, at the same time, on which the Executive Committee is willing to put its imprint, as thoughtful, suggestive, and useful.

It only remains for the Committee to accord its thanks to Professor Thompson, for a well-digested compilation from other manuals, of some hints to visitors of the poor; to A. B. Williams, Esq., for a painstaking and careful abbreviation of our municipal and commonwealth laws relating to vagrancy, poor-relief, and sanitary provisions; to Dr. E. R. Stone, for a useful and judicious series of hygienic hints, bearing especially upon the health of children living in cities; to Miss Juliet Corson, for a paper on domestic economy, which she has freely allowed to be reduced to the simplest and most suggestive hints; and to Mr. A. H. Fracker, for a few brief rules concerning the economical use of fuel and gas.

Were this little book designed for circulation among the poor, its suggestions would have been made more definite, but it is hoped that it will chiefly pass into the hands of those who wish to think for others, and who will, therefore, desire general principles, which they can reduce to specific recommendations where occasion may require.

The tables of organized charitable institutions are as complete as the information at hand will permit. It is no small undertaking to classify the beneficent enterprises of this great city accurately and usefully; but no pains have been spared to make this portion of the Manual exact and serviceable. Upon the favor of the earnest, conscientious minds of this city this volume is launched, in the hope that its usefulness will exceed its defaults; and in the purpose to cure its defects, in any future editions, as fully as they may be made evident.

By order of the Executive Committee,

PLAN OF ORGANIZATION OF
The Philadelphia Society for Organizing Charitable Relief and Repressing Mendicancy.

ARTICLE I.—TITLE.

THE title of this Society shall be “The Philadelphia Society for Organizing Charitable Relief and Repressing Mendicancy.”

ARTICLE II.—OBJECTS.

Its aims shall be :

1. To see that all deserving cases of destitution are properly relieved.
2. To prevent indiscriminate and duplicate giving.
3. To make employment the basis of relief.
4. To secure the community from imposture.
5. To reduce vagrancy and pauperism, and ascertain their true causes.

ARTICLE III.—METHODS.

The objects of the Society shall be attained as follows :

1. By a system of visiting and inquiry so thorough as to secure a full knowledge of the merits of each case.

2. By placing, under proper limitations, the results of these inquiries at the service of Poor Boards, church societies, charitable organizations, and private persons of benevolence, and inviting their co-operation to prevent wasteful and mischievous alms-giving.

3. By obtaining the necessary help for all deserving cases of want from the proper charitable societies, or from official or individual sources; or, failing in this, by furnishing relief from its own funds.

4. By raising the poor from a condition of dependence by fostering their self-respect, and by promoting habits of forethought and self-help, and better and more sanitary modes of living.

5. By seeking to secure the harmonious co-operation of existing charitable organizations with each other and with this Society.

ARTICLE IV.—SOCIETY.

1. The Society shall consist of all the members of its local Associations, and such other persons as shall have contributed not less than five dollars to the funds of the Society in the current fiscal year.

2. The officers of the Society shall be as follows: The Mayor of the City shall be ex-officio President; the Presidents of its Ward Associations shall be ex-officio Vice-Presidents; and the General Secretary and Treasurer, chosen by its Central Board, shall be the corresponding officers of the Society.

3. Stated meetings of the Society shall be held annually, in the month of November, and special meetings may be held at the call of its Central Board.

ARTICLE V.—CENTRAL BOARD.

1. A Central Board shall be constituted, as follows: His Honor the Mayor of the city, two delegates from each Board of Directors of its Ward Associations, the President of the Board of City Trusts, of the Board of Guardians of the Poor, of the Board of Health, of the Board of Managers of the House of Correction, and of the Inspectors of the County Prison, together with representatives of such Societies for general charitable relief as shall be admitted to co-operation. The Mayor of the city shall be ex-officio President of the Board, and there shall be elected annually three Vice-Presidents, a General Secretary, a Treasurer, and such other officers as the said Central Board shall deem desirable.

2. The Central Board shall require daily reports from the Ward Superintendents; shall cause such records to be kept as may be necessary to ascertain the causes of destitution, and for the prevention of fraud, imposture, and overlapping of relief; shall act as the medium of communication with the several existing charities; shall exercise general superintendence over all the workings of the Ward Associations; and shall make a comprehensive annual report to the Society touching all points relating to the attainment of its aims.

3. To carry into effect the objects of the Society, the Central Board may enact such other By-Laws, not in conflict with Articles I. to VII., inclusive, as shall be needful for its government, and thereafter make such alterations or amendments as shall have been announced at a previous stated meeting of the Board, and receive the vote of a majority of its members.

ARTICLE VI.—WARD ASSOCIATIONS.

1. A Local Association, acting through a Board of twelve Directors, to be chosen at every annual meeting, shall be formed in each of the Wards in the city; it shall establish an office for inquiry and relief, and shall employ a paid Superintendent. The boundaries of each Association shall be the same as those of the Ward in which it is situated.

2. The Ward Association shall be composed of all the visitors of their respective Wards, all who shall contribute not less than one dollar in the current fiscal year to their funds; also one Representative, duly appointed, of each congregation in the Ward, and one Representative each from such charitable and other societies as may be approved by the Central Board.

3. The Ward Directors shall be subordinate to the Central Board, and their Superintendents shall be subject to its inspection and advice. The investigation and relief by each Ward Association must be strictly confined within its own limits.

4. In each Ward Association a volunteer corps of women shall be formed, subdivided into Visiting Committees, so that each visitor shall have a small number of families under her care. These volunteer corps shall act under the rules of their Ward Boards of Directors.

5. The Ward Directors shall raise the funds needed for their work, but in time of emergency the Central Board may aid them from the Society's Treasury.

6. The Ward Directors shall adopt By-Laws for their government, subject to review by the Central Board, and in conformity to law and to the foregoing articles.

ARTICLE VII.—AMENDMENTS.

No alteration or amendment shall be made to these Articles unless approved by a meeting of the Central Board, and sanctioned by a majority of the members of the Society present at its next stated meeting.

GENERAL SUGGESTIONS TO THOSE WHO VISIT THE POOR.

BY REV. R. E. THOMPSON.

No person of right feeling can live in the same city, and especially in the same neighborhood, with great numbers of poor persons, without having a desire to do something for them. But it is not so easy to find what is the right thing to do; and even kind and well-meaning people manage, at times, to do a great deal more harm than good. The following suggestions have been gathered out of the experience of persons who have been much in this good work, and who seem to have done it at least as well as any others.

1. The best means of doing the poor good is found in friendly intercourse and personal influence. The want of money is not the worst evil with which the poor have to contend; it is in most cases itself but a symptom of other and more important wants. Gifts or alms are, therefore, not the things most needed,—but sympathy, encouragement, and hopefulness.

2. Women are, in all ordinary cases, by far the best visitors of the poor. A true woman carries with her an atmosphere of influence which makes itself felt. She can go, without offence, where men would not be welcome. She will see a great many things which ought to be considered, but which would escape men. Women have, commonly, more tact and skill in suiting themselves to the case before them. They more easily avoid hasty generalizations. They have more patience and more sympathy than men have ; and, in most cases, they have more time to give to the work.

3. A small number of families, from three to five, are enough to exhaust all the time, attention, and friendly care which one visitor has to bestow upon them. The more experience a visitor has, the more certain she is to prefer this to a larger number.

4. The starting-point of all really useful work is a genuine neighborly interest in those whom you seek to serve. They must be approached as beings of the same flesh and blood, and therefore kinsfolk. Any notion of condescension or patronage is not only wrong in itself, but is also sure to do harm, by preventing the visitor from getting into right and natural relations with her poor friends. No eyes are keener of vision than those which have been sharpened by want.

5. The poor man's house or room is his castle, just as much as the rich man's home is his. Wherever it is possible an introduction to each new household should be had through some neighbor, who is well acquainted with them. The manner of the visitor should always be respectful. She should avoid calling at inconvenient hours. She should make her poorer friends feel that she fully recognizes the fact that she has no right to enter their homes, except that given her by their courtesy.

6. The visitor will do well to avoid undertaking the distribution of alms in any case. Nothing will so much interfere with her proper work as to be recognized as a public almoner. It will close against her the doors of poor people who cannot afford to be thought dependent on charity, but to whom she might be of great service. It will destroy her highest influence with those who continue to receive her, by turning their thoughts steadily in the mercenary direction. As Dr. Guthrie says, "If you offer the poor man a tract and a shilling at once, it's human nature that his eye should turn to the shilling rather than the tract."

7. In cases of urgent need, help may often be obtained at once from poor neighbors. They are the most generous of givers, and to deprive them of such opportunities is to impoverish their own lives. In cases of less urgency, the visitor will refer the person in need of relief to the office of the Ward Superintendent. But it should be understood that nothing can be had through the visitor from any source, which cannot be got without her by direct application to the Ward Office.

8. When the visitor or any of her friends are able and willing to give some personal assistance, it should take the form of employment. Where work is given, it should be paid for at fair, business-like rates. It is of no use to cover up alms in any other dress, for the result will be much the same as from direct giving.

9. The visitor will need to make some effort to keep steadily in view the main purpose of her visit in the midst of the many distractions which will occur. Without making up any formal catechism of topics, she should accustom herself to keeping in mind the chief ways in which influence may be brought to bear, and advice or assistance given, and to applying these to the circumstances of the family whose guest she is for the time. She should keep a memorandum-book for the record of each day's work, partly to refresh her own memory, partly for the information of her successor in the work, in case she should be obliged to relinquish it. But it is not best to use a note-book during a visit, either to prompt questions or to record answers, as this would make the visit seem less friendly.

10. The visitor needs to cultivate the habit of looking below the surface of things, and not judging by first impressions. The poor who have the strongest claim upon our sympathy are generally the silent, sensitive, painfully respectable people, whose clean and tidy rooms conceal to the utmost the evidence of their poverty. They must be sought out with delicacy, and treated with the utmost courtesy.

11. Poverty is very largely associated with disease and a consequent lack of vitality. Our medical profession, through dispensaries and hospitals, have made ample provision for every possible want in that direction. But the sick poor do not always discern their need of medical treatment. They allow disease to become chronic, which might have been cured if taken in time: they suffer their children to become blind, or deaf, or deformed for life, because they think a little sooner or later in the application of remedies will make no difference; and even when they are well aware of their need, they do not always know how to get assistance. The visitor should make herself acquainted with the facts in regard to our medical charities, as given in this manual, so as to be competent to give advice here. At the same time, she should be on her guard to avoid seeing disease where there is none, nor should she send to dispensaries those who are able to pay for medical attendance.

12. The visitor should also make herself acquainted with the location of the nearest Orphan Asylums, Temporary and Permanent Homes, Day Nurseries, and other charities for children, with their rules for admission. While the unnecessary separation of children from their parents is always to be avoided, there are many cases where these institutions can be used to advantage.

13. Every visitor to the poor should have some knowledge of sanitary laws, since the violation of these is the most prolific source of disease. (A sketch of what is most needed has been prepared by a member of the medical profession, and will be found on page 48 of this Manual.) For like reasons, she should inform herself of the nearest parks, squares, and other grounds open to the people, and of the rules which govern their use. In warm weather the health of children, and even adults, is much promoted by passing the morning hours in such places.

14. The poor have legal rights which they often fail to enjoy, through ignorance. They have a right, under our sanitary laws, to have all nuisances abated, and proper precautions taken for their health. They are often imposed upon by pawnbrokers, and by furniture dealers and sewing-machine agents who sell on instalments, and, more rarely, by landlords and house-agents. (An abstract of such of our laws as specially concern the poor has been prepared by a member of the bar, and will be found on page 22 of this Manual.) Where cases arise which do not come within the purview of the Board of Health, the visitor will do well to call to them the attention of some member of the bar with whom she is acquainted, or of some one known for his public spirit.* The redress of such wrongs is one means of keeping the poor in wholesome sympathy with society, by making them feel that laws and courts are for rich and poor alike.

15. Those who have the greatest need to be economical in their purchases are often much less so than other classes. They buy the most expensive articles of food, the least substantial articles of dress, and even costly, cumbersome, and inconvenient pieces of furniture. They have not learned the best ways of preparing food, of which a sketch is given on page 65 of this Manual. On these and many other points of thrift the visitor can give advice which will be worth more than money. But in most cases the subject must be approached with care, to the avoidance of every appearance of censoriousness or meddlesomeness.

16. The poor, as a rule, have never learned "the power of littles." The habit of watching where the pennies go, and of laying up against a rainy day, is generally wanting to them. Our savings-banks and our building associations are patronized by but a very small part of their number. A word in season may be of use to keep spare money out of the whiskey-seller's till, and to get it put to better use.

* New York has a "Society for the Legal Protection of the Poor," which is excellently managed and very useful.

17. In every case the visitor should seek to foster a spirit of self-respect and independence. Her poor friends should be encouraged to feel how great the gulf between honest poverty and the pauperism which is willing to rely upon gifts and alms.

18. Although there is abundant provision made for public education, a very large proportion of poor children get little, and some of them none at all. They are allowed to run about the streets in idleness, or they are sent to earn a few pennies which are not always indispensable to the support of the family. The visitor should awaken and cherish right feeling on this subject, that parents may be induced to make sacrifice for their children's sake.

19. The poorest poor are those who have no wholesome contact with society or with each other. They are those who have fallen into a sordid, isolated, and indifferent life, which is more animal than human. The visitor's first aim should be to strengthen their family ties, "to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children," of husband to wife. She should seek to awaken and cherish their home affections, to cultivate courtesy of speech and manner, and to prompt the little mutual sacrifices which make life gracious. And she should encourage every effort to make home a pleasant and attractive place.

20. Churches and Sunday-schools, aside from all their other uses, will help in the same direction, since they put the poor in the way of a more orderly home life. There are very few of our people who have no affiliation with some religious body, and where these ties have been sundered for a time, the visitor should seek to have them renewed.

But using her influence to win proselytes will seriously mar her work, and is in direct contradiction to the principles and rules of this Society.

21. It is wisest to work for the results which come in the long run, to anticipate disappointments, and not to be disheartened by them. The habits of a lifetime are not to be corrected in a day. The most successful visitor will have discouraging experiences, and, perhaps, for a time little else. The greatest patience, the most decided firmness, and an inexhaustible kindness are all needed in this work.

22. In appealing always to the "better self" of her poor friends, the visitor must always make the appeal from her "better self." She should, for instance, discipline herself never to hear from their lips of wrong doing of their neighbors with either exultation at their exposure or any other of the lower emotions. We have spoken, hitherto, as if the benefits to be reaped from this neighborly intercourse were all on the side of the poor. But this work

"Is twice blessed ;
It blesseth him that gives."

I.—POLICE OFFICERS.

§ 1. Duties.

§ 2. Arrests without warrants.

§ 1. Duties.—Every officer must render such information and aid to all persons when required as is consistent with his duty; be civil to all, but especially courteous to females; receive no gratuity; and must give his name and show his number to any who may inquire therefor. Rules for the Government of Police, 9, 19, 36, and 45, approved 1st January, 1875.

NOTE.—In justice to Mr. Williams it should be stated that, owing to the limited space that could be allotted to him, and the consequent need of condensing the information as much as possible, his paper is simply suggestive; and while the language is intended to convey correct impressions to the unprofessional reader, no important action should be taken without reference to the full text of the laws and rules referred to in the paper.

Officers must know all streets, alleys, courts, and buildings within their beats, and seek to recognize all persons residing therein; they must report all violations of ordinances that they see; all dirty streets and gutters, all nuisances, all policy-shops, disorderly houses, gambling-houses, houses of ill-fame, and places where liquor is sold on Sundays, that exist in their beats. Ibid., 11 and 20.

Officers must enforce strictly the law against vagrancy, and must apprehend "all persons going about from door to door, or placing themselves in streets, highways, or other roads to beg or gather alms, and all other persons wandering abroad and begging," and convey them to the nearest station-house. Ibid., 22. (See Vagrants, § 4 and § 5.)

§ 2. Arrests without Warrants.—An officer or constable seeing the breach of any city ordinance, may arrest the offender and take him forthwith before a magistrate. Act 3d May, 1876, Sec. 1, P. D. 2011. (See Sanitary Provisions, § 65 and § 66.)

II.—MAGISTRATES.

§ 3. Jurisdiction and Powers.—The jurisdiction of each magistrate extends throughout the city, and he is ex-officio a justice of the peace, and has the same jurisdiction, civil and criminal (unless otherwise provided), as was formerly exercised by one or two aldermen. In cases of summary conviction either party may appeal to the Court of Quarter Sessions, and in suits for penalties to the Court of Common Pleas. Act of 5th February, 1875, Sections 12 and 13. P. D. 2036.

§ 5. Arrest of Vagrants.—If any person shall be found offending against this act, any constable or police officer may, and he is enjoined and required, on notice thereof given him by any inhabitant, or without such notice on his own view, to apprehend and convey or cause to be conveyed such person to a magistrate. Ibid. Sec. 2.

§ 6. Trial and Conviction.—The magistrate shall examine such person and shall commit him, being “legally convicted before him, on his own view or by the confession of such offenders, or by the oath or affirmation of one or more creditable witnesses,” to labor upon any county farm, road, or highway, or in any house of correction, poorhouse, workhouse, or common jail, for from thirty days to six months. Ibid. (See § 33, § 34, and § 41.)

§ 7. Penalty for Refusal to Arrest.—The magistrate and officer making such arrest or commitment shall receive from the county fifty cents each, and mileage. Any constable or officer refusing to make such arrest shall be subject to a penalty of five dollars. Act 3d May, 1878, Sec. 1. P. D. 2174.

§ 8. Work to be provided for Vagrants.—“It shall be the duty of the custodian or custodians of any such vagrant, to make active efforts to provide work for every vagrant committed under this act, and not disqualified by sickness, old age, or casualty; and whenever labor cannot be provided in the place to which any vagrant is committed, it shall be lawful for such custodian or custodians, and it is hereby declared to be his or their duty, with the approval of the board of directors, overseers, guardians, or commissioners of the poor, as the case may be, to contract with the proper authorities of any such township, borough, city, county, or other persons, to do any work or labor outside the place of commitment.” Act 8th May, 1876, Sec. 3. P. D. 2081. (See § 12, § 21, and § 37.)

§ 9. Maintenance of Vagrants.—Such work shall be suited to the proper discipline, health, and capacity of the vagrant, and he shall be fed and properly clothed, and those having the custody of him shall provide for him comfortable lodging or quarters. Ibid.

§ 10. Penalty for Violation of this Section.—The violation or neglect of any provision of this section of the act shall be deemed to be a misdemeanor, and the offender shall be liable to imprisonment not exceeding three months, and a fine of not over $100. Ibid.

§ 11. Buildings for Custody of Vagrants.—“The county commissioners of every county in which there shall not be sufficient provision for the safe custody of persons committed under this act, upon the recommendation of a grand jury of the county and approval of the court, are hereby empowered and required to make suitable provisions by buildings or enclosures: Provided, That the expenses of the same shall not exceed the amount fixed by the grand jury.” Ibid., Sec. 6.

§ 12. Almshouses to be Workhouses.—All almshouses and places provided for keeping the poor are held to be workhouses under this act, and the custodians shall provide work for vagrants, and compel them to work, when able, not less than six hours per day. Ibid., Sec. 8. Upon conviction under this Act, any person may apply to the Orphans' Court to appoint a guardian, or place such child in an asylum or home for children, and the parent may be ordered to pay its maintenance. Ibid., Sec. 5.

§ 48. Employment of Children in Factories.—No minor under thirteen years of age shall be employed in or about any cotton, woollen, silk, paper, bagging, or flax factory; and no minor, between thirteen and sixteen years of age, shall be employed in any such factory more than nine months in one year, nor without attending school for at least three consecutive months of the same year; and any employer or owner of a factory violating these provisions shall pay a penalty of fifty dollars. Act 21st April, 1849. Secs. 2 and 4. P. D. 663.

§ 49. Neglected Children of Profligate Parents.—If any father shall neglect or refuse to provide for his children, the mother, if of fit character, may hire or bind them out : and if she be unfit or dead, the proper court may appoint a guardian, who shall apply the earnings of such children for their maintenance and education. Act 4th May, 1855, Sec. 3. P. D. 1008.

§ 50. Apprentices.—(See Neglected Children, § 45 and 49, House of Correction, § 38, House of Refuge, § 42, and Guardians of the Poor, § 30 and 31.)

Penalty for preventing the taking of apprentices.—Any one attempting to prevent any person from taking apprentices shall, on conviction in the Court of Quarter Sessions, be liable to a fine of one hundred dollars and to imprisonment for three months. Act 28th April, 1876, Sec. 1. P. D. 1973.

Charitable institutions may bind out apprentices.—All incorporated homes for friendless or destitute persons or children may receive children indentured by the Guardians, and may bind them out in suitable homes, when their parents or guardians do not provide for them. Act 25th May, 1878, Sec. 1. P. D. 2089.

Misconduct of master or apprentice.—If any master shall misuse the apprentice, or if the apprentice absent himself without leave, or if either party shall not do his duty, the party aggrieved may complain to a magistrate, who may bind over offenders to the Court of Quarter Sessions. Act 29th Sept., 1770, Sec. 2. P. D. 74.

§ 51. Education.—The General Assembly shall provide for the maintenance and support of a thorough and efficient system of public schools, wherein all the children of this Commonwealth above the age of six years may be educated, and shall appropriate at least one million dollars each year for that purpose. Constitution of Pennsylvania, 1873, Art. X. Sec. 1.

VIII.—LANDLORD AND TENANT.

§ 52. Right of distress.	§ 59. Replevin.
§ 53. Goods exempt from distress.	§ 60. To recover possession.
§ 54. Removal of goods when rent in arrear.	At the expiration of the term.
§ 55. Removal of goods before rent due.	I. By jury of inquest.
§ 56. Proceedings on a distress.	II. Before a magistrate,
§ 57. Penalty for receiving goods distrained.	on a lost lease or verbal letting.
§ 58. Penalty for distraining.	For non-payment of rent.
	In case of a fraudulent removal.

§ 52. Right of Distress.—A landlord may seize the goods of a tenant for arrears of rent during or after the term of the lease, but not after the tenant has parted with the goods. Act 21st March, 1772, Sec. 14. P. D. 876.

§ 53. Goods Exempt from Seizure.—Property of the tenant (but not of a sub-tenant or assignee not recognized by the landlord), to the value of three hundred dollars, also all wearing apparel, Bibles, and school-books in use, shall be exempt unless excepted in the lease. Act 9th April, 1849, Sec. 1. P. D. 877, and 636, Note (i).

The officer making the levy and sale, if requested by the tenant or any person in charge of the premises, shall summon three persons to appraise the property which the tenant elects to retain. Ibid., Sec. 2, and P. D. 637, Note (d).

§ 54. Removal of Goods when Rent in Arrear.—When rent is in arrear and the tenant's goods are secretly removed, they may be followed and seized within thirty days. The goods of the tenant's assignee may be followed and distrained, but not after a bona fide sale. Act 21st March, 1772. Secs. 5 and 6, and Note (e). P. D. 877.

§ 55. Removal of Goods before Rent Due.—When the tenant's goods are secretly removed before rent is due, the landlord may consider the rent as due to the time of removal, and may follow and seize the goods within thirty days upon affidavit that he believes that they were removed for the purpose of defrauding him (goods sold bona fide to an innocent purchaser excepted). Act 25th March, 1825, Sec. 1. P. D. 877.

§ 56. Proceedings on a Seizure.—When goods are seized and the tenant or owner does not replevy them within five days, they shall be appraised and, after six days' public notice, sold (if not by that time replevied). Act 21st March, 1772. Sec. 1. P. D. 878.

§ 57. Penalty for Rescuing Goods Seized.—Upon any rescue of goods seized, the person grieved shall recover treble damages and costs against the offender or owner in case the goods go to his use or possession. Ibid., Sec. 2.

§ 58. Penalty for Distraining.—If goods are seized for rent not due, the owner may recover double the value of the goods and full costs of suit. Ibid., Sec. 3.

In suits for rent not over one hundred dollars, magistrates may compel the landlord to deduct the just account of the tenant, and the landlord may then stay his suit and seize in the usual manner for the balance, and the tenant shall have no appeal, but may replevy; but if the landlord shall seize and sell more than the amount of such balance and detain the surplus, he shall forfeit to the tenant four times the surplus detained. Act 20th March, 1810, Sec. 20, and Note (d). P. D. 849.

§ 59. Replevin.—Replevin is “the remedy for the unlawful detention of personal property, by which the property is delivered to the claimant upon giving security (in double the value of the goods, with one sufficient surety—act 21st March, 1772, Sec. 11. P. D. 1265) to the sheriff to make out the injustice of the detention, or return the property.” Morris on Replevin, 17.

§ 60. To Recover Possession at the Expiration of the Term.

I. Before a magistrate and jury:

If a three-months’ notice expires at or before the end of the current year when the lease is from year to year, or, at or after the end of the term when the lease is for a definite period, the magistrate, upon expiration of said notice, shall cause the tenant and a jury to be summoned, and upon judgment being entered for the landlord, shall command the sheriff to give possession and levy on the goods of the tenant for damages and costs. Act 21st March, 1772, Sec. 12, and Note (c). P. D. 879.

II. Before a magistrate:

If a notice to quit was served three months before the end of the term (the term being for one or more years or at will), the magistrate upon entering judgment for the landlord shall command a constable to give possession and levy on the goods of the tenant for damages and costs, unless the tenant shall within ten days give security, and appeal or take out a writ of certiorari to the Court of Common Pleas. Act 14th December, 1863, Sec. 1. P. D. 882.

To Recover Possession on a Verbal Letting or Lost Lease.—Where there is a lease or verbal letting of the premises, and the landlord is unable to prove the beginning and conclusion of the term, he may require the tenant to furnish him in writing with the date at which his term commenced; and if the tenant fail to do so within thirty days, the landlord may give a three-months' notice and proceed as above; but if the tenant make affidavit that he is unable to comply, stating the cause of such inability, the landlord shall give six months' notice and proceed as above. Act 28th Feb., 1865, Sec. 1. P. D. 883.

To Recover Possession for Non-payment of Rent.—When the tenant fails to pay the rent due, and there are not enough goods on the premises to pay it, except such as are exempt, the landlord may proceed before a magistrate to recover possession after fifteen days' notice, if served between April 1st and August 31st, inclusive, or after thirty days' notice if served during the rest of the year; and the magistrate shall summon the tenant to appear within three to eight days, and if judgment is entered against the tenant, and he does not within five days give security and appeal, the magistrate shall command a constable to give possession and levy for costs; but meanwhile the tenant may stop proceedings by paying the rent due and costs. Act 3d April, 1830, Sec. 1. P. D. 884.

To Recover Possession in case of Fraudulent Removal.—

If the tenant shall remove from the premises without delivering possession, and without leaving sufficient property to secure the payment of three months' rent, and shall refuse to give security for the same within five days after demand, the landlord may sue for possession before a magistrate, who shall summon the tenant to appear within five to eight days, and, upon entering judgment against him, shall command a constable to deliver possession and levy for costs. Act 25th March, 1825, Sec. 2. P. D. 886.

IX.—PAWNBROKERS.

§ 61. Pawnbrokers must exhibit their accounts.	§ 63. Articles pawned may be sold.
§ 62. Legal charges.	§ 64. Surplus money to be paid over.

§ 61. Pawnbrokers must Exhibit their Accounts and Articles Pawned.—Pawnbrokers must record in books a description of all articles pawned, the sum loaned thereon, and the name and address of the pawner, to whom they shall give a certificate containing the substance of the record. They shall also keep an account of goods sold and the sums due thereon. Their books (Nos. 1, 2, and 3) shall at all times be opened to the owners of the articles, or to any person presenting an order from the mayor or marshal of police: and such person may also examine the articles, if their description corresponds with any goods lost. Ordinance 19th January, 1856, Secs. 5, 6, and 9.

§ 62. Legal Charges.—No pawnbroker shall demand more than six per cent. interest a year; and in addition charge for storage and other expenses more than five per cent. per month. Ordinance 16th February, 1856. Sec. 2.

§ 63. Articles Pawned may be Sold.—No pawnbroker shall sell any articles pawned until they have been in his possession four months for dry goods and clothing of all kinds, and eight months for all other articles; within which times such articles shall be delivered on application made by the owner or his legal representative, and the surrender of the certificate and payment of the sum loaned with interest and charges. Ordinance 19th January, 1856. Sec. 3.

§ 64. Surplus Money to be Paid Over.—Any surplus money arising from the sale of articles pawned beyond the sums due thereon, and the expenses of sale, shall be paid over to the person who pawned them. Ibid.

X.—SANITARY PROVISIONS.

§ 65. Unwholesome food, etc.	Time allowed.

Complaints.	§ 69. Intoxicating drinks.
Notice to abate nuisances.	§ 70. Who may give notice.

§ 65. Unwholesome Food, etc.—Police officers must arrest any person knowingly selling or exposing for sale any emaciated, diseased, tainted, or putrid meat or fish; or any stale, blown, unwholesome, or adulterated food, drink, or medicine; and such offenders shall be liable to fine or imprisonment. Acts 7th May, 1855, Sec. 1, and 17th April, 1861, Sec. 1 (P. D. 1091), and 31st March, 1860, Sec. 69 (P. D. 334), and Ordinance 23d September, 1864.

§ 66. Arrests for Committing Nuisances.—Officers must arrest any person they find throwing or ordering the throwing of any putrid or unsound meats or offensive matter, or anything likely to become offensive, into any street, alley, public ground, or lot, or upon the banks or in the waters of the Delaware or Schuylkill Rivers, or any branch thereof; also any person they find throwing or depositing any straw, dirt, chips, filth, shells, or other rubbish in any sewer, street, alley, or other public place in the city; and if any officer shall find such matter so deposited he must endeavor to find the offender, and report. Ordinance 23d September, 1864, and Supplements.

§ 67. Abatement of Nuisances.—Police officers, constables, and watchmen are enjoined, and citizens are respectfully desired, to give information to the Board of Health of any violation of the health laws or of the rules and regulations of the Board. Rule of Board of Health CCXXIX.

Complaints.—The recording clerk shall receive all complaints of nuisances, having the name and residence of the complainant attached, and place them in the hands of the inspectors for examination (Rule LXXIII.), who shall examine and report within twenty-four hours, and when a nuisance is found shall immediately serve a notice upon the owner or agent of the premises to abate the nuisance. Rules LXXXVIII. and LXXXIX.

Time allowed.—Twenty-four hours after notice shall be allowed to remove dead animals and other matter in a state of decomposition, and to cleanse and disinfect infected houses; and three days to cleanse overflowing and leaky privy-wells and water-closets, to disinfect foul wells, and to cleanse slaughter-house manure-pits during quarantine season; and five days to cleanse full privy-wells and manure-pits, filthy houses, cellars, yards, alleys, and vacant lots, and to repair and regulate surface-drainage and leaky and defective drain-pipes. Rule CCXIII.

Non-compliance.—At the expiration of the notice the inspectors shall re-examine the nuisance (Rule XCH.); and if nothing has been done, the health officer shall abate the nuisance, and award the contract therefor, within twenty-four hours. Rules XXXIX., LX., and XLVIII.

Unpaid Bills.—Bills for the removals of nuisances not paid within four months after date may become a lien upon the premises to be recovered by Sheriff's sale. Rules XCIV. and XLIV., and Act 7th April, 1830, Sec. 2. P. D. 494.

§ 68. Tenements with Defective Light and Ventilation.—All tenements without proper flooring or other means of light and ventilation than the doorway are nuisances; and unless the owners, agents, or occupiers thereof close them within five days after notice, the health officer shall close them and hand over the occupants to the Guardians unless otherwise provided for. Rule CCIV.

§ 69. Intoxicating Drinks.—Wilfully furnishing intoxi-eating drinks by sale, gift, or otherwise to any person when intoxicated or of known intemperate habits, or to a minor or insane person, for use as a beverage, shall be a misdemeanor, and the offender shall be fined from ten to fifty dollars, and be imprisoned from ten to sixty days. Act 8th May, 1854, Sec. 1. P. D. 945.

§ 70. Who may forbid Intoxicating Drinks.—Verbal or written notice to an innkeeper or other person forbidding him from furnishing intoxicating drinks to an intemperate person may be given by any member of the family, or blood relation, or guardian of the poor, or magistrate of the district in which such intemperate person resides or has legal settlement. Ibid., Sec. 2.

The penalty for violating such prohibition within three months after notice is fine and imprisonment as above. (§ 69) Ibid.

HYGIENIC SUGGESTIONS.

BY DR. E. R. STONE.

VENTILATION.

An abundant amount of fresh, pure air is of the greatest importance to health. It has been ascertained that the mortality from pulmonary consumption, the greatest scourge of this climate, is largely increased among operatives, who work in a close, impure atmosphere.

Ventilation in the Homes of the Poor is very difficult to carry out, not only because their houses are small and overcrowded, and often badly situated, but also because the circumstances of the occupants enforce an economy of heat in cold weather. But an apartment which has a close, disagreeable smell when first entered from the fresh, out-door air is positively harmful to those inhabiting it, and this should be remedied even at the expense of losing some of its warmth. The fact should also be borne in mind that a badly-ventilated room often feels chilly, while the temperature would be quite high enough for comfort were fresh air allowed to enter. A vitiated atmosphere is especially harmful to children, whose resistance to bad influences is much less than that of adults, and becomes a prolific, although indirect, cause of the great mortality among the offspring of the poor.

Ventilation of the Sick-Room.—Here it is very hard to overcome the prejudices of people about "taking cold"; this is a groundless fear, as some means can always be devised for letting in fresh air without exposing the patient to any risk. The importance of ventilation in the sick-room cannot be overestimated, and attention to this point may turn the balance towards recovery in a case which would otherwise prove fatal.

Living-Rooms.—Living-rooms should be well aired in all weathers at least once daily. An open fireplace, with a fire to provoke a draft through the chimney, is an excellent means of ventilation; but even without a fire the open chimney will do something towards rendering a close room more wholesome, and should, therefore, never be closed up. Stove-pipe holes for the same reason should be kept open. To make ventilation from a window effective, it should be open both above and below, so that as the impure air, which, being warmed by the lungs and made lighter, tends to rise and escape at the upper sash, a fresh current may enter from the lower. The expense-saving expedient of making the upper sashes of windows immovable is to be much deprecated, and the influence of intelligent persons should be enlisted to remedy this serious drawback to health in our poorer houses.

Sunlight.—The most healthful rooms are those to which the sun has free access. A sunny garret, however small and inconvenient, is always to be preferred to a damp, dark cellar. The removal at once from such underground apartments should be strongly insisted upon.

Drying Clothes.—Babies' diapers should not be dried in an occupied room, and especially not at the kitchen stove, where the food can absorb the poisonous effluvia. If they cannot be washed at once, they should be dried in the open air and warmed by the stove when dry.

Sleeping Apartments.—Sleeping apartments should never be without some means of ventilation. This is especially important to the poor, who are often compelled to crowd whole families into one room.

CLEANLINESS.

Personal Cleanliness.—The skin is one of the great channels by which the system rids itself of waste matters, which cannot be retained without injury. It is, therefore, scarcely necessary to suggest the importance of keeping the surface clean and in a condition to carry on its function. But it will be necessary to teach some persons that dirt is never healthy, and soap and water not at all weakening. Some children are robust enough to withstand bad hygienic influences, but it is only necessary to visit the homes of the poor to see the sickly ones, and to learn how many fail to survive the early years of childhood. We will not expect to find in these homes a convenient bath-room, but every house can boast of a wash-tub, which here finds an excellent use. Teach mothers the physical and moral importance of washing and dressing their children as frequently as circumstances will permit, and the latter will grow up with an independence and self-respect unknown to the indolent and slothful.

Cleanliness about the House.—Encourage cleanliness about the house, and the removal of everything which is unsightly or injurious to health.

The Cellar.—The cellar is frequently used as a receptacle for all kinds of rubbish and filth, the atmosphere from which contaminates the whole house. The cellar should be kept perfectly clean, as dry as possible, and should at least twice in the year receive a good coat of whitewash. Much rubbish can be gotten rid of by burning, and removal with the ordinary ashes.

CLOTHING.

Children.—Children bear the extremes of temperature badly, hence they should be well protected in cold weather, and the feet especially should receive the first attention. In winter the catarrhal troubles, to which they are so liable, are often caused by going out, insufficiently clad, into the wet and cold from the close, over-heated room, which, in many poor houses, serves for living-room, dining-room, and kitchen.

Infants.—Heat is the life of infants, and great care is necessary to see that they are warmly clad. Flannel should always be used next the skin. See that the dress is loose enough to allow the muscles free movement. The tight bandage which is applied to support the abdomen and insure a "good figure," is not only quite unnecessary, but really injurious by compressing the body and interfering with breathing. Attention to this matter will soothe many fretful babies. When an infant frets and cries persistently, have it stripped to make sure that the clothing is not uncomfortably tight, or that a pin is not sticking into the flesh, an accident which frequently occurs where common pins are used.

Too much Clothing.—Helpless infants are often laden down with an amount of clothing which keeps them constantly bathed in perspiration, relaxing the skin, and in this way provoking the cold by the very means which are intended to prevent it.

BEDS.

The only desirable bed within the reach of the poor is a well-made straw or husk mattress. The feather-beds found in some houses are unfit for use, as they are often filthy, and always unhealthy.

CARPETS.

Carpets, even those of the most careful housekeepers, are doubtful blessings, and the thin, half-worn pieces seen in our poorer houses only serve to cover up the dust which should be swept out, and to retain the germs of disease. Well-scrubbed boards are much more agreeable than a ragged, soiled carpet; but if objection is made to the bare floors, pieces cut from the least worn and cleanest parts, which can be removed and shaken out of doors at any time, may be laid in the more frequented parts of the room.

DIET.

Infants.—It seems almost superfluous to say that milk is the natural, and therefore only suitable food for infants. yet many ignorant persons have not learned this simple truth, and must be checked in their desire to add something “stronger.” The milk which nature supplies contains an abundance of all elements required for the growth and development of the body. The various starchy substances, as arrow-root, sago, bread, crackers, etc., must not be depended upon in feeding young infants, as they are not digested, provoking indigestion and diarrhoea, which soon reduces the child to actual starvation.

Artificial Feeding of Infants.—Babies who receive their food from the mother’s breast need, as a rule, nothing more, and are happy in a freedom from the risks of artificial feeding; but many poor women are compelled from ill-health or work which takes them from home, to feed their babies “by hand,” and a knowledge of how this should be done is of the greatest importance, if we would lessen one of the chief sources of early suffering and death. Cow’s milk approaches nearly to that of the mother, and is the most available substitute. It must be fresh and of good quality, for if it is thin and watery, or if it quickly sours, it is unfit for use.

Care and Preparation of Milk.—It must not be allowed to stand in a warm room, but should be put away as soon as procured in the cellar, if that is cool and clean, or in cool weather out of doors. If the weather is warm, it should be brought to the boiling point, and then kept in as cool a place as can be found. Vessels used to receive it should be scalded out in hot suds and kept scrupulously clean, as the smallest particle of sour milk will be enough to start fermentation in the whole mass. For an infant less than two months old, the milk had better be diluted, one part milk to two of water, at each feeding, to which should be added a small quantity of white sugar, and given slightly warm. This strength may be gradually increased, until at six months it may be two parts of milk to one of water. This rule, of course, does not apply to milk which has already been watered. Such milk is not fit for use, if better can be procured.

Condensed Milk.—In case it is found impossible to get or keep fresh milk, and especially in warm weather, condensed milk, which has the advantage of being slightly cheaper, and on which many children thrive better, may be advantageously substituted. For a child one or two months old, three teaspoonfuls of condensed milk should be mixed with a half-pint of warm water. The strength may be gradually increased until, at a year, two tablespoonfuls to half a pint are taken. Condensed milk requires no additional sugar.

The Amount of Milk Required.—Young infants should not be fed oftener than every two hours, and this period should be increased after two months to every three hours. One pint or a pint and a half of pure milk is as much as the most vigorous babe under two months old will require. At six months not more than a quart. Babies are often overfed. An ignorant mother will try to soothe every complaint with an application of the bottle, and takes the greedy-ness with which the infant swallows as evidence of hunger, when very likely the latter is crying from the pangs of indigestion, which it vainly endeavors to assuage by drinking whatever may be offered.

The Nursing-Bottle.—A very common source of danger is in the nursing-bottle. The milk may be fresh and of good quality, but the child grows sick and emaciated, and as the mother says, “the milk does not agree with it.” Under these circumstances, the bottle will often be found to have a stale, sour smell, due to particles of decomposing milk which have been allowed to remain, and which never fail to change wholesome food into a fluid absolutely poisonous. This must be avoided by the greatest care in cleansing the bottle in hot suds, and rinsing in water in which a little common soda has been dissolved. The best nursing-bottle is an ordinary six- or eight-ounce vial, surmounted by a black rubber nipple. The more elaborate ones, provided with cork, rubber and glass tubing, should be forbidden, as the apparatus is too costly to be frequently renewed, and they are most difficult to clean; and also because the flexible tube offers a great temptation to careless nurses to put baby and bottle away together in the cradle, where the milk, soon spoiled by the heat of the room and the child’s body, is taken by the infant whenever it happens to awake. The bottle should be held in the hand of the nurse until the baby has had enough, when it should be emptied and washed at once. It is a good plan to have two bottles, using them alternately, the one not in use being kept immersed in water to make sure of its being clean. If the mother can supply any milk at all, the child should have the benefit of it, the deficiency being made up from the bottle, as even a small amount of the natural food is better than none, and may even save the little one's life in sickness when it refuses everything else.

Diet of Older Children.—The presence of teeth is nature's signal that the time has come when a more varied diet can be taken with safety. This at first should be of the simplest character, consisting of well-baked bread, which is not fresh, crackers, rice, or some other simple farinaceous food, as arrow-root or sago. If it can be afforded, the child may have light broths made of beef or mutton. Milk should still be the principal food until almost all the teeth are cut, that is, during the first two years. The practice of giving young children "table victuals" is sure to cause sickness, besides giving them a distaste for milk and other simple articles of food.

The Abuse of Tea.—Among older people, especially women, the abuse of tea needs correction. It is not uncommon to see the tea-pot almost constantly on the stove, and much money is spent for this stimulant which should go to buy good, wholesome food. Dyspepsia and a long list of nervous ailments are directly traceable to the excessive use of tea. Children should not be allowed to drink tea and coffee, as they tend to injure their delicate digestive organs, and by stimulating the nervous system, lay the foundations of serious nervous diseases.

CARE OF CHILDREN IN HOT WEATHER.

In the summer, a large number of children fall victims to the heat, the mortality among them bearing a distinct relation to the thermometer. The victims are gathered largely from our courts and alleys, for here the air is closest, and most laden with the foul exhalations of over-crowded houses. Much can be done by teaching the poor how to take care of their children at this trying season.

Clothing and Baths.—They should be dressed as lightly as possible, the clothing being changed as often as circumstances will allow. Children should never wear at night the clothes which have been worn during the day. A bath of tepid water should be given daily.

Fresh Air.—Plenty of fresh air is of the greatest importance. Infants should be carried in the cooler parts of the day into the wide streets, public squares, or better still to the river or to the park, if time can be spared for the trip. The Sanitarium for sick children is an excellent charity, as it provides an opportunity to breathe the fresh, cool air, for which so many children droop in the overcrowded city.

At Night.—They should sleep by themselves and not in bed with others, and the cradle should be placed in the coolest spot in the house.

Diet in Hot Weather.—The greatest care is requisite in the diet, everything which could possibly disorder the digestive organs being carefully avoided. Young children should receive nothing but milk, that of the mother being of course preferred. The child should never be nursed while the mother is overheated or much fatigued. If the natural food is wanting or insufficient, cow's milk must be substituted in the way described in "Artificial Feeding of Infants." Older children must not be allowed to eat unwholesome food of any kind, especially unripe or decayed fruit. Cool water should be allowed whenever desired.

Disorder of Stomach or Bowels dangerous in Summer.—Every mother should know that derangement of the stomach or bowels is particularly dangerous to her baby during the heated term, and should claim the attention of a physician at once.

Hints to Older Persons.—In hot weather every one should avoid copious draughts of ice-water and eating largely of meat. They should also remember that spirituous liquors of any kind render them liable to sunstroke and prostration.

CARE OF THE SICK.

Importance of Early Treatment.—Disease, especially in childhood, often advances with great rapidity, and in some cases the chance of cure soon passes by while the mother is treating the case on her own responsibility, or with the advice of a neighboring druggist, or trying the "cure-alls" which well-meaning friends are always ready to recommend. Tell her of the danger of delay, that she may lose no time in calling in assistance. The city is so well supplied with medical charities that no one need go without proper attendance.

Fresh Air.—Co-operate with the physician in his efforts to have the sick-room ventilated, by explaining the necessity of fresh air and the removal of everything which will render the atmosphere offensive. All vessels should be removed and cleansed at once, and, if possible, the fumes of cooking should be excluded. Smoking should not be permitted in the sick-room, as the odor of tobacco is usually disagreeable, and often provokes nausea and distaste for food.

The Diet in Sickness.—The nurse should always receive her instructions concerning the diet from the physician, and nothing should be given the patient until he has been consulted about it. The depraved appetite of disease often craves the most improper food, and many lives have been sacrificed from carelessness in this particular.

Sponging the Body with Tepid Water.—In most cases the patient will receive much comfort and advantage from sponging the body with tepid water. This may be done one part at a time, while the rest of the surface remains covered, in this way avoiding exposure.

Exclude Visitors.—If the case is at all serious, all curious visitors should be denied access to the sick-room. They annoy the invalid by their tiresome questions, and occasionally do real harm by unwittingly relating the most depressing accounts of sickness and death.

DISINFECTANTS.

Remove the Cause of Bad Odors.—The presence of foul odors about or in a dwelling is good evidence of a condition incompatible with health. It should be remembered that it will be useless to cover up the offensive smell by fumigations with tar, camphor, and such things: the cause of the trouble must be sought out and remedied. This will be found in decaying organic matter, obstructed drains and sewers, filthy gutters, neglected garbage, cesspools, or something of the kind. Here thorough cleansing is the only reliable disinfectant.

Chloride of Lime.—If the source of the offensive odor cannot be discovered or remedied, and in contagious diseases, it will be well to expose some chloride of lime in shallow vessels in various parts of the house. This substance, which has the advantage of being cheap, costing about six cents a pound, acts by giving off chlorine gas, which destroys organic matter wherever it comes in contact with it. If the gas does not come off freely, the process may be hastened by adding a little vinegar. While using it, it should be remembered that chlorine gas is a powerful bleacher, and will remove the color from clothing.

Carbolic Acid.—For washing and disinfecting foul vessels of any kind, a solution of carbolic acid is perhaps the best: say carbolic acid two ounces, and water one gallon.

Lime and Copperas.—A cheap deodorizer for offensive sinks, etc., may be made by mixing equal weights of lime and sulphate of iron or copperas. The latter costs from five to eight cents per pound.

Disinfection in Contagious Diseases.—There is need of great reform in the manner in which contagious diseases are dealt with. In many cases absolutely nothing is done to prevent the spread of contagion: children are sent to school in a few days after recovery; infected clothing is worn everywhere; the well mix with the sick: so that it is not at all remarkable that many contagious diseases are always present with us, and claim a constant place in the mortality list. The fear of smallpox compels many to take precautions against it, but scarlet fever, less loathsome but generally more deadly, is allowed to go about unheeded. Diphtheria is believed to be contagious, but not to the same degree as scarlet fever, still sufficiently so to render it dangerous. It would be well, too, to pay more attention to the restriction of measles, whooping-cough, and chickenpox, but these generally trifling ailments are looked upon by the public with so much unconcern, that it will be almost useless to suggest means of prevention.

Contagious Diseases Communicated by Germs.—Contagious diseases are believed to be communicated by minute germs, which develop in countless numbers in the bodies of the sick, infect the air in the immediate vicinity, and are deposited in bedding, clothing, carpets, and, in fact, everything about the sick-room. These germs will remain active for an almost indefinite period, and often spread disease when danger is least expected.

Directions for Preventing the Spread of Contagion.—The following directions will not always be found practicable among the very poor, but it is hoped that the visitor will use her influence to have them carried out as fully as possible.

Separation of the Sick from the Well.—The sick should be separated as completely as possible from the well, the apartment to be used for the sick-room being that which is farthest removed from the living part of the house. Children. if they have not been in contact with the developed disease, had better be sent away in the charge of relatives or friends. The nurse should not mingle with the rest of the household, and should not go into the street without washing and changing her clothing.

Preparation of the Sick-Room.—The sick-room should be cleared of all needless furniture, carpet, and other articles likely to harbor the poisonous germs. A liberal supply of fresh air should be provided for, without placing the patient in a draught.

Disinfecting Clothing, Vessels, etc.—Soiled bed and body linen should be placed in vessels containing chlorinated soda or carbolic acid. The discharges should be received in vessels containing chloride of lime or carbolic acid, and should not be thrown into the water-closet or cesspool until they are thoroughly disinfected. In typhoid fever, the evacuations are particularly dangerous.

Disinfecting the Sick-Room.—After recovery or death, the room cannot be safely occupied until it is carefully disinfected. This can be done by completely closing the apartment and burning therein three or four pounds of common sulphur, which, of course, can only be done in the absence of living persons. The sulphur can be had for about five cents per pound. The room should be kept closed for six or eight hours, and then aired for about the same period, after which it may be used with safety.

Infected Clothing.—Infected clothing should be burned, or, if this cannot be afforded, linen or muslin may be boiled, while clothing which will not wash should be subjected to dry heat. The latter process cannot be carried out without special conveniences for the purpose, such as are in use at the Municipal Hospital, the authorities of which would probably make arrangements to disinfect such articles as might be brought to them, were the proper influences brought to bear.

Mattresses and Furniture.—Mattresses should be emptied, the ticking washed and filled with new straw. The furniture should be washed in a solution of carbolic acid.

Contagion after Scarlet Fever.—The risk of contagion after scarlet fever is great as long as any of the outer skin is peeling off. A child should be kept from school for at least six weeks after recovery from either scarlet fever or diphtheria.

VACCINATION.

The prejudice against vaccination is much less at the present day than formerly; but there are many who, while they admit the advantage of being protected against small-pox, fear the introduction of grave constitutional disease. They will often put off the City Vaccine Physician with many excuses, believing that he, while vaccinating many, grows careless in the selection of "healthy" virus. In the vast majority of cases, the stories of transmitted disease are without foundation, and the physicians who are appointed to vaccinate the poor are quite as reliable and conscientious in the exercise of their duties as any others; and, indeed, their large experience especially fits them for it. The matter direct from the cow is not open to the above objection. It can now be procured in abundance, and should be used when objection is made to the ordinary vaccination.

Re-vaccination.—It should be remembered that protection does not continue for an indefinite period. The operation should be repeated at about fifteen or twenty years of age, and whenever smallpox is prevalent.

HINTS ON DOMESTIC ECONOMY.

ABRIDGED FROM A PAPER BY MISS JULIET CORSON.

WATER.

THE quantity of water used as food cannot be estimated by what is drunk, because all fresh foods contain more or less of it, and dried foods are cooked by the addition of it. Of soups and stews, which are exceedingly wholesome, usually three-fourths of the volume is water.

Water for drinking should be clear and colorless, without odor, pleasant and refreshing to the taste. It should not stand in the sun nor in a close, warm room.

Hard water coats the surface of meat or vegetables boiled in it with lime, rendering them hard to digest. Medium soft water is the best for general purposes. For cooking vegetables it should be boiling and well salted.

TEA AND COFFEE.

These are luxuries. Their effect is to retard the elimination of waste matter from the system, hence they reduce the demand of the body for food. They are not to be used by children. Three heaping teaspoonfuls of tea or of coffee evenly roasted and finely ground, should be used to make each quart of the infusion. The effect of boiling upon tea and coffee is to extract the tannic acid and to dissipate the aroma. Tannic acid hardens the albumen of the milk used with these beverages and makes it more difficult to digest. Some housekeepers recommend boiling coffee for a very few minutes in a close vessel, but both tea and coffee should be drunk soon after their making.

SELECTION OF FOOD.

The greatest good is derived from certain combinations of food; for instance, bread is more wholesome and palatable with butter or cheese, either of which supplies its deficiency in flesh food. Peas and beans make a very good food when used with a little animal fat. Habit affects the appetite and general health. A person accustomed to one diet may be deranged by a new and equally wholesome one. More fat is needed in cold than in temperate regions, in winter than in summer. A man well clad and housed will suffer less from a scanty food than one thinly clad and exposed to the weather.

DIGESTIBILITY.

Whatever process hardens food renders it less susceptible to digestion. Whatever softens or disintegrates it prepares it for the easy action of the digestive powers. Meat recently killed, on account of its stiffened fibres, should not be used. By keeping it a few days it can be more easily digested, but any indication of putridity should condemn it. The flesh of full-grown animals is more digestible than that of the young, except sucking pig. Veal is hard to digest. Venison, mutton, beef, lamb, veal, and pork are digestible in the order named. Fat meats are less digestible than lean ones.

Among fish the white-blooded, such as cod, haddock, smelts, and bass are the most digestible, while the fat and red-blooded kind, such as eels, mackerel, herring, shad, salmon, sturgeon, muscalonge, are difficult of digestion, though very nutritious. Milk fresh from the cow is quite digestible; but warm or cooked is more so than when cold or raw. Fresh, sweet butter is more digestible than when rancid, salt, or cooked. Home-made bread is digestible and nutritious, but fried cakes and rich pastry are far from wholesome. Maccaroni, arrow-root, tapioca, and corn-starch are useful in combination with other foods. With the exception of peas, beans, and lentils, vegetables are less nutritious than meat or grain, but are valuable on account of their salts and acids, and should be chosen with reference to the ease with which they can be softened in cooking.

Fruits of close, dense fibre, as apples, are made more digestible by roasting or stewing. Preserved fruits are indigestible in proportion to their hardness.

Sweet and starchy substances are insufficient for nourishment.

Fat and oils are valuable in proportion to the cold or the activity one must endure. Meat and the nitrogenous vegetables nourish the body and maintain its vital heat.

Milk is capable of sustaining life for a long time without other food.

The value of different foods is relative: for instance, equal weights of lean beef and of lentils or beans would cost about the same amount, but the meat would need to be eaten with bread or vegetables in order to form a meal, while the beans would require only the addition of salt and water in cooking to make a wholesome food, besides increasing three times in volume by cooking, while the meat would decrease about one-fourth in volume.

COOKING.

The best method is boiling or roasting before an open fire. The heat should be intense for roasting to quickly sear the surface of the meat, so as to retain all its valuable juices; but the meat should be turned often enough to prevent burning. No seasoning should be applied until the meat is cooked.

Frying.—Frying renders meat difficult of digestion by hardening its surface and overcharging it with fat.

Boiling.—In boiling or stewing, meat should be plunged into boiling water, boil for five minutes, and then the vessel which contains it should be removed to the side of the fire to simmer until the meat is tender. Fast boiling makes meat tough without hastening its cooking. For soup or beef-tea, where the object is to extract the nourishment, the meat should soak for a short time in cold water, be put over the fire in the same water, and slowly brought to a boil.

Salting and smoking lean meat makes it indigestible by extracting its juices and hardening its tissues; but fat meat is rendered more digestible by this process, which also conveys to the system the valuable antiseptic properties of salt and smoke.

Game of all kinds is both digestible and nutritious. Poultry is more easily digested than meat, unless it is exceedingly oily.

ECONOMY IN FOODS.

Meat.—There is great economy in buying fat bacon on account of its excess of carbon, and in combining it in cooking with vegetables which contain an excess of nitrogen, such as peas, cabbage, etc. We persistently recommend peas, beans, and lentils to those who wish economical as well as wholesome food. Excessively salt brands of pork and bacon should be avoided, as salt extracts from meat its valuable juices and mineral salts. Meats cured partly by smoking are preferable to the pickled sorts, or those kept in brine.

In full-grown meats the waste in boiling is about one pound in four; in baking, a pound and a quarter; in roasting before the fire, one pound and a half. The waste is greater if the pot is left uncovered, or the oven-door open.

The closer and firmer the fibre of meat is, the less is the waste in cooking.

Bones are exceedingly useful in the preparation of soups and stews, especially those which contain much marrow.

They should be chopped fine and boiled slowly for nine hours.

Haslet and tripe yield as much nitrogen as the solid flesh, while liver yields much more. Combined with potatoes, onions, grain, or leguminous vegetables, such parts of the animal have a nutritive value in excess of meat, while costing far less.

In this country, and especially by the poorer classes, an exaggerated importance is given to flesh over the nutritive worth of vegetable foods.

Soups.—The value of soup as food cannot be overestimated. The most economical of soups, eaten with bread, will satisfy the hunger of the hardest worker.

The pot liquor in which meat has been boiled needs only the addition of some cereals, with seasoning, to form a good nutriment. That prepared from skin and bones can be made equally palatable and nutritious by boiling with it a few vegetables and sweet herbs, and some rice, barley, or oatmeal.

Lean meat should be chopped fine, put in cold water, a pint to a pound, slowly heated, and thoroughly skimmed. Five minutes boiling will then extract from it all its nutriment and flavor. Strain off the liquor, and eat it seasoned with bread, biscuit, or vegetables. Peas or beans, boiled and added to the soup, make it a most excellent food for sustaining health.

It is well to keep a clean saucepan on the back of the stove to receive the clean scraps of meat, bones, poultry or game, which are found in every kitchen, but vegetables should not be put in it, as they are apt to sour. The proportions of water to meat and bones is one and a half quarts to a pound, but if the soup is to boil six hours the quantity of water should be two quarts. The meat and bones should be well chopped and broken, be put into cold water, and brought to boil slowly and evenly, and the pot should be kept well skimmed. An hour before the soup is done, add one carrot, one pared turnip, one onion stuck with three cloves, and a bouquet of sweet herbs.

Soup should not be kept standing in a metal pot, but poured into a clean earthen jar or bowl.

Other Foods.—One pound of red-blooded fish is equal in food value to eight pounds of potatoes, but is inferior to meat. Where cheap and abundant it is an important article of diet.

Milk and eggs are among the best of foods, but their price varies with the season.

Cheese is an exceedingly valuable food. From two to four ounces, with plenty of bread, make a hearty meal, even for a laborer. It is best when about six months old, but loses its value as it becomes sharp or bitter. English dairy and American factory cheese, of good brands, is the best for economic use.

The economy of the potato lies in its cheapness. It is best in summer, autumn, and winter. As it prepares to sprout its nutritive value diminishes. If potatoes are peeled before cooking the waste is very much greater than if peeled after boiling. There is less waste in boiling potatoes in their jackets than in baking them. They also lose by being allowed to stand and shrivel.

MARKETING.

Poor beef is dark-red, gristly, and tough to the touch, with a scanty layer of soft, oily fat. Buy meat cheap as you can, but be sure it is fresh; slow and long cooking will make beef tender, but tainted meat is only fit to throw away. A good test of tainted meat is to thrust a knife or wooden skewer into the meat close to the bone, and then to smell it to see if the odor is sweet. Beef is the most nutritious of meats, except the leg of pork.

Poor mutton has a pale color, and thin white fat, and parts easily from the bone. Yellow fat and very soft flesh is a sign of diseased mutton. Test mutton for any taint as you do beef.

Lamb is more suitable for women and children than for men. A carcass should weigh about twenty-five pounds. If the kidney-fat is soft and moist do not buy the meat.

Veal is difficult of digestion, and not high in the scale as nutritive food. It taints first in the neck; the loin is just spoiling when the kidney-fat turns soft and clammy. BOB VEAL, which is the flesh of calves too early killed, should never be eaten. It is soft, flabby, and sticky.

Pork.—Stale pork is moist and clammy, and its smell betrays its condition. Measly pork has small kernels in the fat, and is dangerous food. The surest escape from the danger of trichina is thorough cooking. Cook your pork until it is crisp and brown by a steady fire, or boil twenty minutes for each pound. Pork is a good winter-food, but difficult of digestion, and should be used sparingly by the very young or the old. As bacon, it has the antiseptic properties of salt and smoke, and becomes a valuable adjunct to vegetable food, and is a good relish.

Poultry and Game.—These are less nutritious, but more easily digestible than meat, and hence are best for persons of weak digestion, sedentary habits, or brain-work. Fresh poultry may be known by its bright eyes, pliable feet, and soft, moist skin.

Fish.—Fish is a better flesh-forming food than poultry, lamb, or veal, but furnishes less heat. Sea-fish is more nourishing than fresh-water varieties. The red-blooded species are better food than the white-blooded; the salmon, sturgeon, eels, and herring, than the cod, haddock, and flounders. Fresh fish have firm flesh, rigid fins, bright, clear eyes, and ruddy gills.

Oysters, clams, scollops, and mussels should be eaten very fresh.

Lobsters and crabs should be bright in color, alive, and heavy for their size. Put them alive, head first, into boiling water, with a handful of salt, and cook for about twenty minutes.

Vegetables.—Fresh vegetables are necessary to health. They are cheap and nourishing, especially onions and cabbage. Peas, beans, and lentils are cheap, and furnish so much nourishment that one hardly needs meat with them. If they are cooked in water which has been used for boiling meat, they make a very healthy kind of a meal. All juicy vegetables should be crisp and fresh; if a little wilted they can be restored by sprinkling with water and laying them in a cool, dark place. Roots and tubers should be pared and laid in cold water an hour or more before cooking.

Green vegetables are best just before they flower ; roots and tubers are good until they begin to sprout.

It is a great saving to buy such vegetables as will keep by the quantity.

Fruit.—Fresh fruit is especially important for children, as it keeps the blood pure and the bowels regular. Next to grains and seeds, it contains the greatest amount of nutriment to a given quantity. Apples are a wholesome fruit, and are usually plentiful and cheap. They nourish, cool, and strengthen the body. All fruit should be bought ripe and sound. Imperfect or decayed fruits are neither economical nor healthful.

Nuts are full of nutritious oil, but are hard to digest, and are not necessities of life.

(The above hints are condensed from a valuable paper furnished by Miss Juliet Corson, of New York, the full text of which is too voluminous for this little manual. The Committee have reserved the original manuscript in the hope of publishing it entire at some future day.)

ON GAS AND FUEL.

BY MR. A. H. FRACKER.

COAL.

1. Select bright clean coal, free from slate, and see that the weight is full.

2. Keep the stove clean, and the ashes well taken up.

3. Keep the fire clear and well down on the grate, so as to keep the bottom of the stove hot; the top will take care of itself. Remove clinker and slate.

4. Allow no more draft than is necessary for the combustion of the coal. All unconsumed gases escaping from the chimney, by reason of too strong drafts, is so much fuel wasted.

5. In the morning clean the fire from underneath with the poker; turn on all the draft for a little while to consume the cinder, and, at the same time, warm the room. Put on coal while the fire is bright, and shut off the underneath draft, and, in cold weather, shut the stove-door, making the stove as near air-tight as possible. Thus the coal is soon heated and the generated gases consumed; but the draft being slight, the coal burns slowly away, imparting heat to the stove, instead of sending it out the chimney.

Be careful not to let gas escape into the room from the stove, as it is poisonous.

GAS.

Use two or three-foot burners; and renew them when corroded, or when the gas blows through. The cost of burners will soon be repaid in the reduction of gas bills. When not in use, turn down the gas so that it does not smoke. Regulate the flow of gas at the meter, so that when the ordinary number of burners in use are turned on "full-head," there is no blowing through. Lava-tipped burners are the best, because they do not corrode. Detect leaks in fixtures by applying a lighted match. Turn the gas off square, as it is a deadly poison when it escapes in a room, and free gas will explode when brought in contact with a flame.

Philadelphia Society for Organizing Charitable Relief and Repressing Mendicancy.

OBJECTS OF THE SOCIETY.

THE aims of this Society, as set forth in its Plan of Organization, are,—

- 1 To see that all deserving cases of destitution are properly relieved.
2. To prevent indiscriminate and duplicate giving.
3. To make employment the basis of relief.
4. To secure the community from imposture.
5. To reduce vagrancy and pauperism, and ascertain their true causes.

The accomplishment of these aims will be sought,—

1st. By bringing the people of each locality in contact,—the comfortable with the wretched, the strong with the depressed.

2d. By extending a system of visitation over all parts of the city, with a view to discover real necessity and to stop vagrant beggars; to teach the poor the laws of health and economy; to show them where there are facilities for the improvement of themselves and their children; and to carry to them the best social influences.

3d. By instructing the people on the evils of giving to strangers without inquiry.

4th. By directing the suffering to the charitable institutions of the city adapted to each special form of need.

5th. By offering to these institutions a medium of correspondence and co-operation, so that they may work in greater concert, and with more rapid efficiency.

6th. By providing forms of relief suited to cases that do not come within the scope of existing institutions.

7th. By endeavoring to secure the best distribution of relief between voluntary and municipal charity.

8th. By preventing imposture, through a system of correspondence throughout the city, and registration.

9th. By gathering representatives of Ward Associations, and of other charitable institutions, into a Central Board, for comparison of views, for the study of the best methods of dealing with destitution and degradation, and for ascertaining the causes of pauperism, with a view to its prevention.

The hopes of the friends of this movement are well expressed in the language of the London Charity Organization Society, which is here repeated:

“By this organization, when fully carried out, it is hoped that no loophole will be left for imposture; no dark holes and corners of misery, disease, and corruption remain unvisited; no social sore fester untouched by wise and gentle hands; no barrier of ignorance or selfish apathy stand unassailed between the rich and the poor; no differences of creed prevent unity of action in the common cause of humanity. The Society, therefore, appeals to all—rich and poor, powerful and weak, learned and unlearned—to aid it, by contributing the fraction of time, intelligence, and means each can spare to the service of all; and it urges each to remember that the efficiency of an army does not depend on the individual strength of the units composing it, but on their combined and harmonious action on a well-concerted plan.”

DIVISION 6.—REFORMATORIES.

FRANKLIN REFORMATORY HOME FOR INEBRIATES* (1872), 911, 913, and 915 Locust St., 8th Ward.—For treatment and reformation of men addicted to drunkenness. (See also Asylums for Insane, Defective, and Inebriate.)

FRANKLIN REFORMATORY HOME FOR WOMEN, office 220 N. 13th St., 10th Ward.—For treatment and reformation of women addicted to drunkenness. (See also Asylums for Insane, etc.)

HOUSE OF CORRECTION, EMPLOYMENT, AND REFORMATION* (1870), Holmesburg, 23d Ward (office 6th St. below Arch).—For purposes indicated by the title; receiving white and colored able-bodied paupers and vagrants, male and female, habitual drunkards, street-walkers, and disorderly persons; also minors not under 16 years of age who are truants, disobedient to parents, idle about the streets, deserting their homes without just cause, or keeping company with dissolute and vicious persons. Admission granted by the Managers to those desiring it on application to the Board. Others committed for cause, by Judges of Court of Quarter Sessions, managers of the various almshouses, and inspectors of county prison, as more fully set forth in Legal Suggestions, page 32 (which see). Pres., Robert Laughlin, 112 S. 3d St.; Treas., Wm. H. Taylor, 132 S. 4th St.; Sec., Edwin Palmer, corner Harmony and Hudson Sts.; Supt., Saml. W. Catteil.

HOUSE OF THE GOOD SHEPHERD* (1850), 23d above Walnut Sts., 8th Ward.—A retreat for the reformation of inebriates, for unfortunate females who have fallen, and also for those who may be in danger of falling. All white females applying are received without regard to nation or creed. Apply to the Mother Superior, between 9 and 11 A.M., or from 1 to 5 P.M. Average number of inmates, 195. A new building is being erected at 36th and Sycamore Sts. Pres. and Treas., Archbishop Wood; Superior, Mother Mary des Anges Porcher.

HOUSE OF REFUGE* (1826), 23d and Parrish Sts., 15th Ward (office, 21 N. 7th).—Is not a prison for punishment, but a manual-labor school for the education and reformation of wayward and vicious children, and the rescue of friendless orphans and vagrant youth of both sexes, and all colors, not over 16 years of age, where they are taught elementary English branches, industrial pursuits, and habits of obedience, and instructed in their moral and religious obligations. When reformed they are indentured to persons of good moral character to learn some useful trade or business. Reputable parents, conscious of their incompetence to govern their children, often place them here to protect them from the perilous influence of vicious associates. Admission is granted by the Judges of the Courts of Quarter Sessions or of Common Pleas, except those of the City of Philadelphia; on complaint of parents or guardians; or, if none, on complaint of the District Attorney, or by the Magistrates of the city. Application for apprentices can be made at the office, No. 21 N. 7th. Pres., Jas. J. Barclay; Vice-Pres., John M. Ogden and Alfred M. Collins; Treas., Henry Perkins; Sec., Wm. S. Perot. (See also Legal Suggestions, page 34.)

THE HOWARD INSTITUTION, UNDER THE CARE OF AN ASSOCIATION OF WOMEN FRIENDS, OF PHILADELPHIA* (1858), 1612 Poplar St., 15th Ward.—For the care and reformation of discharged female prisoners, or those who, on account of evil habits, need moral restraint and discipline. After a term of satisfactory probation, the inmates are assisted in procuring suitable situations in city or country, preferably the latter. Apply to any of the Managers. Directress, Elizabeth J. Sharpless, 1438 Penn Square; Treas., Rebecca T. Haines, 545 N. 22d St.; Sec., Sarah N. Pope, 446 N. 7th St.

MAGDALEN SOCIETY OF PHILADELPHIA* (1801), N. E. Cor. 21st and Race Sts., 10th Ward.—Provides a home for the care and reformation of fallen women. Inmates are retained long enough to break off old associations, and to qualify them to support themselves in some honest occupation, when suitable homes are provided for them. Open to all under 30 years of age who are anxious to reform. Apply at any hour at the Home. Accommodates 60 persons. Pres., Arthur G. Coffin; Treas., John W. Biddle; Sec., Andrew H. Miller.

MIDNIGHT MISSION* (1868), 919 Locust St., 8th Ward.—For the rescue and salvation of fallen women, through the agency of midnight-meetings, suitable homes, industrial pursuits, and other proper instrumentalities. Means will be taken for the rescue of girls detained against their will in houses of ill-fame, on information to any of the Managers. Pres., Rev. Saml. E. Appleton, D.D., 1804 De Laneey Place; Treas., John McCardle, 16th and South Sts.; Sec., John Graff, 809 Locust St.

THE ROSINE ASSOCIATION OF PHILADELPHIA* (1847), 3216 Germantown Ave., 28th Ward.—Provides a home to rescue fallen women from vice and degradation, to elevate their moral nature by religious instruction, and to teach them how to gain an honest living and render them useful members of the community. Apply to the Managers. Pres., Rebecca C. Grim, 1314 Franklin St.; Treas., Elizabeth Diamant, 663 N. 12th St.; Sec., Tillie M. Pierce, 623 Marshall St.

CLASS III.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DIVISION 1.—FUEL SAVINGS.

THE FUEL SAVINGS SOCIETY OF THE CITY AND LIBERTIES OF PHILADELPHIA* (1821). Secretary's office, 217 South 6th St., 5th Ward.—Has for its object to encourage among the poor the practice of economy and thriftiness, so as to enable them, from their summer earnings, to provide for their winter fuel; and to this end receives deposits of money from private consumers of fuel, whose circumstances will not permit them to purchase a supply when it is plenty in the market. Deposits, however small, will be received, but must not exceed the value of three tons of coal in one season. Keepers or inmates of immoral houses, including taverns, cannot deposit with the Society. Respectable druggists and others act as Receivers, among whom are James T. Shinn, S. W. Cor. Broad and Spruce Sts.; W. B. Chambers, corner 5th and Pine; Robert England, 10th and Catherine; George M. Snowden, S. W. Cor. 4th and Noble Sts.; S. T. Jones, 15th and Race Sts.; J. L. Bispham, 710 South 2d, and others. Deposits must ordinarily be handed in before October 31st. Pres., Israel H. Johnson; Treas., Charles P. Perot, 226 West Washington Sq., and 250 North Broad St.; Sec., Bartholomew W. Beesley, 217 South 6th St.†

† Similar provisions for fuel savings to the above exist in very many beneficial associations, workingmen's clubs, and congregational societies; and visitors and superintendents should inform themselves of those which exist in their own wards, in order to suggest them to those who should be stimulated to use such agencies.

DIVISION 2.—BENEFICIAL ASSOCIATIONS.

(Purely Mutual.)

N.B.—Nearly all the Foreigners' Relief Societies also have mutual provisions for aiding their own members in distress, as well as for giving general relief to worthy persons of the same nationality who are not members.

ARTISTS' FUND SOCIETY OF PHILADELPHIA (1835). Secretary's office, 1621 Filbert St., 9th Ward.—Relieves its members and their families in distress. Professional artists in the departments of painting, sculpture, architecture, and engraving, and also students and amateurs, are eligible for membership. Pres., Isaac L. Williams, 631 North 11th St.; Treas., Samuel Sartain, 210 Franklin St.; Sec., N. H. Trotter.

BANK CLERKS' BENEFICIAL ASSOCIATION OF PHILADELPHIA* (1869), 118 S. 7th St., 8th Ward.—A mutual organization to provide for the families of deceased members. Members must be, or have been, officers or clerks of the banks, savings banks, or Clearing-House of Philadelphia and vicinity. Monthly dues, 50 cts.; $500 is paid to the family of each member at his death. Pres., B. F. Dennison; Treas., R. E. Wright; Rec. Sec., G. A. H. Rose, Mechanics' National Bank; Cor. Sec., W. G. Oves, Manufacturers' National Bank.

BETHANY MISSION (COLORED) PROVIDENT SOCIETY* (1856), Brandywine, near 16th St., 15th Ward.—This Mission has a Provident Society and Saving Fund; also Sabbath-school, Band of Hope, and library (of 600 volumes). Pres. and Treas., Marcellus Balderston; Vice-Pres., S. B. Garrigues; Sec., W. H. Garrigues, 608 Arch St.; Librarian, S. R. Garrigues. (See also General Relief.)

BOOK-KEEPERS' BENEFICIAL ASSOCIATION (1874), 12th and Filbert Sts., 9th Ward.—Pays $500 to the families of deceased members; and also strives to promote the interest of members by confining membership to practical and experienced book-keepers. Entrance, $5 for applicants not over 40 years old, and $1 additional for each year over 40. None admitted over 50 years, nor under 21 years of age. Dues, 50 cents per month, and $1 at the death of a member. Apply to the Secretary. Pres., Edward Wheeler; Treas., Watson Deputy; Sec., James G. Keys, 260 Madison St.

BUILDING ASSOCIATIONS may be found in every part of the city. Their object is to aid members in building and paying for their houses by the payment of small monthly instalments into a common fund, which is loaned to the members desiring it on the security of their houses. The fund is also increased by the premiums and interest paid for the use of the money, fines, etc., and when properly and honestly managed has materially assisted many mechanics and persons of small means in securing a home. The rules, however, in regard to the payment of dues and the interest on the money borrowed are very strict, and none should be encouraged to become members unless they fully understand the requirements and are able to fulfil them. Visitors may safely recommend them in such cases as a means of cultivating habits of economy and forethought, and of leading to the elevation and self-respect which the possession of a home will always give.

CALEDONIAN CLUB, 214 and 216 Pine St., 5th Ward.—Helps its own members (Scots) by the usual benefits in case of need. Chief, M. N. Cochrane; Treas., Edward MacHarg; Sec., Alexander White.

THE CORPORATION FOR THE RELIEF OF THE WIDOWS AND CHILDREN OF CLERGYMEN OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN THE COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA* (1769), 212 South 4th St., 5th Ward.—Is a life-insurance corporation, in which only the clergymen above named can become policy holders. It pays gratuities, and makes reductions on the annual premium from the interest on the assets. Pres., Hon. Peter McCall; Actuary and Treas., I. Somers Smith; Sec., James M. Aertsen.

FRANKLIN (WORKINGMEN'S) CLUB HOUSE (1872), 104 E. Huntington St., 19th Ward.—Contains free reading-room for workingmen, with a good library. Membership, $1 per year. Also sustains a debating society, lectures, and other entertainments; social rooms with innocent games, and a night-school for pupils in elementary studies, and classes in natural science, philosophy, and chemistry for artisans. Reading-room open daily, from 10 A.M. until 10 P.M. Pres., Dr. W. H. Burnett; Supt., John Lane.

GERMAN ROMAN CATHOLIC CENTRAL VEREIN IN THE UNITED STATES (1855).—Has 9 Societies in Philadelphia, as given below. It is a mutual society, for the relief of its members in sickness or distress, and the aid of their families at death. Only Catholics in good standing in their parishes, and in good health, are eligible as members. It also mutually aids travelling members of the Irish Catholic Benevolent Union, who are provided with regularly issued travelling cards, equally with its own members. For admission into any of the Philadelphia Societies apply as follows, viz.:
